The Adams's Boys

APR 15 1921

✓ A poem by James W. Foley. Screened by Angela Murray Gibson ✓

Entire poem appears on screen. Young lady reads it to a group of three small children. The Reader, appears in close ups, previous to each line or lines appearing on screen. Each line or lines read is immediately illustrated or acted out by three boys. (The Adams's Boys.) Most of the scenes are taken on a farm. Horses, cows, ducks, pigs, sheep, foxes, baby with rabbit and dog appear in picture.

One boy rides calf and three boys ride a bucking pony.

Boys have their chores to do but are like three bosom companions. They get fun out of it all. They climb trees and-- and pitch hay but thru it all they remain perfect little gentlemen.

The action elled for in the poem appears on screen but numerous scenes with the above animals are added.
